Oil and Metal News

Oil prices fall on predictions of swelling crude inventories, weak demand

NEW YORK: Oil prices slipped for a third trading session on Tuesday as investors focused on the prospect of swelling oil supplies and weak demand, while showing little reaction to U.S. presidential campaign upheaval. Brent crude futures for September fel L 9 cents to $82.31 a barrel by 0005 GMT. U.S. West Texas Intermediate crude for September declined 10 cents to $78.30 per barrel. Traders mostly ignored U.S. President Joe Biden's decision to call off his reelection bid and endorse Vice Presid Ent Kamala Harris on Sunday. Citi analysts said they believed neither Harris nor Republican nominee Donald Trump would promote policies that would greatly affect oil and gas operations.

Toy Maker Mattel's Stock Soars on Reported L Catterton Buyout Offer

Mattel shares soared over 15% Monday, nearly erasing year-to-date losses following a report it received an acquisition offer from LVMH-backed private equity firm L Catterton. The offer could also encourage renewed interest from rival Hasbo, which has previ Ously engaged in merger talks with Mattel. The news comes as Mattel faces pressure from activist investors to restructure. Mattel will report its latest quarterly results after the bell on Tuesday.
